The house is built of brick, in English bond with random stretchers in the header course with diaper work. It was reconstructed from a structure west of Easton on Villa Road which was destroyed in the 1930's. It was presumably the 1670 home of the well-known Quaker, Wenlocke Christison, a pioneer of freedom of religion in Maryland. It is a reconstruction built in 1970 by Dr. Henry Chandlee Forman, F.A.I.A.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Dr. H. Chandlee Forman has reconstructed a portion of a structure which stood west of Easton on Villa Road until it was destroyed in the 1930's. According to Dr. Forman, the structure was the 1670 home of Wenlocke Christison, a Quaker and pioneer of religious freedom of Maryland.

The building is one and a half stories in height with a steeply pitched gable roof and a brick gable end on the west. The structure faces north and stands in a neighborhood of twentieth century houses.

This is a one-bay building with a large room on the first floor. The large interior fireplace is located against the brick gable where there is a broad enclosed chimney with a corbelled cap and a white bond of two courses. Brick bonding and pattern is quite interesting: the regularity of the English bond is broken by random stretchers in the header course; and the floor line of the upper half story is marked by four courses of stretchers. There are random glazed headers and diaper work along the eaves. There are two two-light casement windows on each floor. The windows are secured by plain, wide frames and penny end strap hinges.

The other three elevations are covered with random width board and batten siding. The joist ends are exposed. Barge boards finish the roof at the eaves.

The building is used as a studio and a workshop, and the interior details are both reconstructions and antique. The fireplace opening is very wide; there is an enclosed corner stair beside the fireplace.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Ending of Controversie is interesting both as a reconstruction and as a document of an old house now lost. The diaper work and bonded chimney, as well as the exposed joists, are architectural elements not seen in the town of Easton; and the building itself represents a period of Talbot County's history which preceeded the founding of the town. Therefore, this reconstruction is a physical document which contributes to the wide range of historical architecture represented in the town.
